The next day I discovered that by walking ten miles through the forest, I arrived back at the railway where there was a small station. So having said goodbye to my kind friends, I set out to climb the hill that led to the castle, and from there to the forest of Zenda. The oldest part of the castle was still in a good state of preservation. Surrounding it was a moat, deep and wide, and on the other side a fine modern building put up by the last king. It was now the country house of the Duke of Streslau.

When I came nearer, I saw that the old and the new parts of the castle were joined by a drawbridge. In fact that was the only way into the old castle. A broad driveway led to the building. I thought how convenient for Duke Michael this was; if he wanted to see no one, he could cross the bridge, and have it pulled in after him (it ran on rollers). Nothing less than a company of soldiers with heavy guns could get him out.

Continuing on, I soon entered the forest and walked for an hour or more in its cool shade. It was a lovely place, the great trees touching each other over my head, the sunshine glinting through here and there. After a time I sat down by a fallen tree trunk to smoke my pipe and enjoy myself in peace. When it was finished I went off into a very pleasant sleep, in spite of the fact that I was on the private property of Duke Michael. I was woken by a voice, rough and loud.

“What the devil have we got here! Shave him, and he would be the king!”

I opened my eyes, and found two men looking at me with great curiosity. Both wore shooting dress and carried guns. One was rather short and very strongly built, with a big square head, a grey moustache and small light blue eyes. The other was a thin young man of average height, with dark hair, and rather graceful. I understood the first to be a soldier, the second a gentleman used to moving in good society, but with something of the army about him too. It appeared afterwards that my guess was a good one.

The older one came up to me, followed by the other, who politely raised his hat. I rose slowly to my feet.

“He is the right height too,” said the older man, in a low voice, looking at my six feet two inches. Then with a careless touch of his hat, he said: “May I ask your name?”

“As you have taken the first step, gentlemen,” said I, with a smile “suppose you tell me yours first.”

The young man smiled pleasantly. “This,” said he, “is Colonel Sapt, and I am called Fritz von Tarlenheim. We are both in the service of the King of Ruritania.”

I bowed and, taking off my hat, answered: “I am Rudolf Rassendyll, a traveller from England. Once for two or three years I was an officer in the army of Her Majesty Queen Victoria.”

“Then we are all brothers of the sword,” answered Tarlenheim, holding out his hand, which I took immediately.

“Well, MrRassendyll,” said Sapt in his deep voice, “you may not know it, but you look exactly like our King.”

This made me uncomfortable, and I remembered the looks of the official and of Johann the day before. If I had known this, I would have given more thought to my visit to Ruritania. But it was too late now.

A. The oldest part of the castle was in

1. good condition.
2. ruins.
3. need of repairs.
4. a poor state.

B. A modern building was

1. the Duke of Streslau’s main residence.

C. Two men who woke the narrator were looking at him

1. with suspicion.
2. with anger.
3. with interest.
4. in disbelief.

D. Colonel Sapt and Fritz von Tarlenheim were similar in

1. appearance.
2. character.
3. origin.
4. occupation.

E. The younger man greeted the narrator

1. heartily.
2. courteously.
3. casually.
4. loudly.

F. Rudolf regretted not

1. thinking twice before visiting Ruritania.
2. visiting Ruritania before.
3. being able to visit Ruritania.
4. knowing important information about Ruritania.

G. Rudolf felt uncomfortable because he

1. had been woken by Colonel Sapt and Fritz von Tarlenheim.
2. remembered the way Johann looked at him.
3. remembered the way officials looked at him.
4. learnt that he looked like the King of Ruritania.

Задание, предложенное Ивану:

This is a part of a letter from Harry, an English pen-friend.

.... I'm fine but I've got a very busy week ahead. I'm a member of the school team and we are preparing for an important match in the National Championship. Are you fond of football? Do you watch football matches on TV? What other sports do you enjoy?

Well, I'd better go now. I've got to do some more training – I don't want to lose this match.

Take care and write back soon.

Write a letter to Harry. In your letter answer his questions ask 3 questions about the National Championship. (100-140 words)

Dear Harry.

Hi! How's it going? Thanks for your last letter. I'm glad you are in your school football team now! In your letter you asked me about football. Well, I'm really fond of it. It's a great game and I'm always happy when team wins. But I don't watched football mutches on TV because it's rather boring. I prefer playing to watching as it's more exciting. I'm also keen on roller-skating. It's fun to take part in street competitions and to perform different tricks. Anyway, what about your preparation for the National Championship? Do you work hard? How many times a week do you train? Do you get on well with your team-mates? Well, I'd better go now as I have to tidy up my room. Write back soon! Sincerely, Ivan.
